

Persistence pays off
Musicians look for a Waterloo sale
Page 4 & 7

SPOKE

A LEARNING NEWSROOM FOR JOURNALISM STUDENTS

World Cancer Day
Six-year-old goes above and beyond
Page 3

WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 22, 2012

COLLEGE OF THE SOUTHERN SHORES, OREGON

WWW.SPOKONLINE.COM

4TH YEAR - PG. 4

More than 4,100 vote in referendum

More than 4,100 students had their say on whether or not they want a Grand River Transit extension bus pass after voting in a referendum held by Gonzaga students last week.

The results of the vote held from Feb. 14 and 15 are available in all press issues.

Jeff Scherer, GSC president, said, "We would like to thank the students who participated in this referendum for their engagement, feedback and all around their input."

He said the outcome must be made immediately after the referendum because GSC had to validate votes and eliminate double votes. Due to the high voter turnout, this process took longer than projected.

"Each vote has been reported and entered into a spreadsheet," Scherer said.

"Through this spreadsheet we can see student numbers, names and a time stamp. With this online data we are able to validate a student, highlight duplicate votes and validate which vote will be removed in accordance with our referendum policies."

Referendum results were reported to be well met during Reading Week, along with an announcement on potential next steps moving forward.

Scherer said anyone with questions about the process or the results should contact him at j.scherer@ Gonzaga.edu or via Facebook.

For questions to the referendum results, see Spoke's Feb. 28 issue.

IT WAS A COMICAL DAY ON CAMPUS

PHOTO BY MICHAEL VITTO

Gonzaga's Students are putting their own twist on comic market, with the month's meeting local businesses to come in and sell their wares. Above: Alfonso Espinoza (left), chief editor of Southern Shore Press, and Jaden Kelly, an employee of The Top Society, show off their merchandise in the Alley.

Entrepreneurs can get cash

BY ERIN KIMPE

Many people have thought about becoming an entrepreneur, but have never taken the leap due to obstacles such as a lack of startup funds or the risk of failure. The Business Company program is trying to help with that. The program was created by the Ontario government and in this area, is delivered through the Waterloo Region Small Business Centre (WSBC).

The Business Company program offers $5,000 to students looking to start their own company and run it through-out the summer. What is the money is given to students to help with startup costs and the other half is given upon successful completion of the program. It also offers mentorship opportunities for the participants.

Applicants must be between the ages of 18 and 25 and be in high school or post secondary school and returning to school after the summer. They must be willing to put in 20 hours a week and work no more than 20 hours a week at another job. The applicants are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis after completing a business plan. Last year there were 66 applicants and 30 people were accepted. This year there are 35 people accepted.

"Applicants have to want to go into [the program] without consuming themselves with anxiety about it," said Matt Bickner of WSBC, Vice President. "When you start a new business, it tends to become your life, so you need to make a lot of money right away."

BY HARRIS CROSBY

Winterloo is the only winter festival in Waterloo that welcomes families, young adults and students who experience snow to enjoy some outdoor events.

The festival runs from 4 p.m. on Friday Feb. 24 and 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday Feb. 25. This is the sixth year for the Winterloo festival which was called the Dogs until it was changed last year. It was created all because there is more to the event than just having snow dogs and having dog sled races.

Jason Moore, chair of the Waterloo festival and there are many events this year as well as over 50 vendors from all over Waterloo. These include Green Harvest, Debra George, Waterloo Materials and David Tatham. The University of Waterloo has also programs will have a booth to see money for their top later in the year.

"This year on Friday night we are going to have a young adult with a stage, live garden and having games going on," Moore said.

One of the ways to get to see some students from around the area who want to experience and be part of Winterloo while they are in school. One said students make up about a quarter of the population of the city.

On Saturday it will be more about the families Moore said. Some of the events they are planning for that day are dog sled races, live carriage art, activities at the historic Holmes Farmery for families including a lot of snow and the famous Winterloo chili cook-off.

"It's a great festival, we have lots of activities planned for everyone. No matter what you like, come and find it at the festival," she said.

Moore said people are more likely to stay in during the winter months and Waterloo gives people the opportunity to get out with their families.

"It's a great reason to get outside during a time when we normally don't go out," said Alfonso Espinoza, the manager of wine and food bar in Waterloo. "There are lots of live activities for people of all ages, especially this year with Friday night being focused more towards adults."

"It's a homegrown and we try to have some specific programs and it's for those who like to make and play in Waterloo," she said. "We hope families together and give them something to do in the winter."

For more information go to www.winterloo.ca

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Activities important for patients with dementia

BY KIMBERLY GALLAGHER

One of the toughest dementia care challenges have to make a patient happy and once they're there, there are plenty of activities to keep them happy and engaged.

At Riverside Glen in Danbury, there are many things for the patients to take part in. Things might even be funnier per therapy. There are fun things scheduled everyday all year long.

"My principle unit usually are to take part in things," said Carl Mitchell, who was working for dementia. "I was shocked when I walked in one day and found them doing something with everyone else. His name even came to mind to go for the walk with me, but then he was doing one and his attention with the instructor."

Mitchell's grandfather had been from dementia and needs help looking after himself, but she said he was still as happy as ever and keeps a positive attitude.

"When he was in with us, he would sit up the whole room," said Mitchell. "And then he just kept doing his therapy. I was so shocked I'm glad they got him doing things like that."

She said they have many other fun things that they get into. Like listening, coloring, and even helping to look after all the plants in the "green room."

"Of course I feel bad that he had to come here and leave his home," said Mitchell. "But here doing a lot of stuff that has some close feeling. He never used to be at school or take about looking after plants."

Mitchell, Billings Mitchell's stepmother, who is also a registered practical nurse (RPN) at another nursing home in Danbury said she's happy he's been getting involved in activities too.

"It was hard to get him to do things at home," said Billings. "He always just wanted to sit in his chair and watch TV. But when he's here, he comes around for walks to be up and walking around and seeing what's going on. I think it's good that he's getting some exercise and stimulation."

Billings said working as an RPN especially with patients who have dementia can be challenging, but that she loves it all the same.

"I know that the nurses here would be really hard to make sure these patients are happy," said

Billings. "It can be hard especially when they are resistant, by asking the things because they don't remember asking for it. A few minutes before they just have to have a lot of patience and I'm so glad the pain hasn't hit. They trust him like gold."

Billings said they do the same type of activities at the nursing home who work at it to keep the patients active. "They obviously love playing things," said Billings. "They may never have been liked playing before, but at the home it gives them some things to do and then they end up loving it."

She said doing activities like this helps their physical and mental health. It can also put family members involved which may help make the patients want to do it more. The therapy is something that can so greatly improve their mood too.

"Yet therapy is in making the video patients and Billings. "I they have Alzheimer's, taking them out to play with the animals helps to calm down their agitation or behavior. It also helps if patients have had to leave their pets at home when they come to the nursing home as something to visit their pet is always a happy moment. They may have dementia, but they never forget the love they hold for their pets."

Mitchell agreed that that is important, making the residents playing with the animals.

"It kind of brings a tear to my eye," Mitchell said. "It makes them so happy and of course that's really important for the families who feel guilty for leaving in the home, but they're happy for their loved ones."

Getting the residents to take part in the nursing home is also a great way to improve both physically and mentally. It can help with strength, memory and flexibility.

"I think my grandpa has definitely improved mobility," said Mitchell. "He is to walk with a walker, but I can't believe how much faster he's gotten."

She noted that he'll be able to run for up and down the hallway pretty soon. She added that he's been at the home for a year and to go on walks and always tell her he'll walk her to the elevator when she's leaving.

"I can't believe some of the things he's been doing," said Mitchell. "He never used to want to walk anywhere and now he's willing to walk with me when I leave."

"Sometimes we'll ask him about the activities he may have done that day but he can't remember," said Billings. "But I think he really does enjoy it at that moment and I'm very happy about that."

Billings and Mitchell agreed that it will take a while for them to know that "just feel" of having to put their family members in the home, but they're happy for their loved ones.

"Every so often he'll ask to go home, so not where he is and we just explain he needs extra care and we remind him that he loves it here," said Billings. "Once he takes part in an activity, it takes her mind off things like that. Doing arts and crafts or looking after plants or playing with the dogs that come in here really lowered his frustration level."

Billings said she looks forward to seeing his constant improvement and when that they have progress and activities to keep the patients occupied and entertained.

"An example of part of the program is making flowers and things. The residents' happiness always comes first."

ROCKING SOME PAPER AND SCISSORS

PHOTO BY KIMBERLY GALLAGHER

With a creative partnership of a parent and child, a young girl's talent for the game of Rock, Paper, Scissors was put to the test during a competition at the Danbury Art Fair. The winner received a $100.00 prize and a pair of scissors. Competition consisted of a round of rock, paper, scissors, with the winner of the round going on to the next round. The final winner, a young girl, was crowned the champion of the competition. The winner of the competition was a young girl named Kaitlyn, who was 10 years old. She was the only girl to win the competition. The winner of the competition was a young girl named Kaitlyn, who was 10 years old. She was the only girl to win the competition.

WORLD HIJAB DAY AT CONESTOGA

PHOTO BY KIMBERLY GALLAGHER

World Hijab Day was held on Feb. 11 at Conestoga College. It was a day of celebration for the Muslim Student Association (MSA) and other students who wear hijabs. The event was held in the Conestoga College cafeteria. The MSA members and other students who wear hijabs were invited to the event. They were asked to wear their hijabs and to participate in the event. The event was a success and it was a great day for everyone involved. The MSA members and other students who wear hijabs were very happy to participate in the event. The event was a great day for everyone involved.

A BATTLE FOR LOVE

Junevt Yetkiner's persistence paid off

It was another warm summer day for June Babin at the Jones-Beeson Café on Niagara Street in Madison. As asked at the café at the time and used freely managing the kitchen she put together many of the organic and local dishes the café offered. The year was 2010 and it was also the year she met Robert Tishman.

Tolson said he was presiding at the public hearing over all these topics. Tolson said right off and it was that right that she got her first experience of him.

Recently he was the person that led over me, also used the same way put the most beautiful experience in

At the time she was in a serious relationship, and so while she said he made her feel at ease, she did not have any intentions beyond that. For him, however, it was quite a different feeling: she caught him completely off guard in the guard where he found himself thinking about her during the rest of his performance.

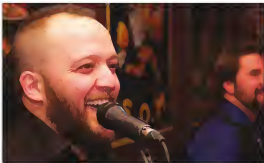

"I remember thinking, 'I need to talk her out. I need to do something.' But I did."

He was the gentlest soul I'd ever met. His music was the most beautiful experience. ♪ ♪

| Age Group | Total (%) | Male (%) | Female (%) | Unknown (%) |
|-----------|-----------|----------|------------|-------------|
| 18-24 | 15 | 10 | 20 | 5 |
| 25-34 | 25 | 15 | 35 | 10 |
| 35-44 | 35 | 25 | 45 | 20 |
| 45-54 | 45 | 35 | 55 | 30 |
| 55-64 | 55 | 45 | 65 | 40 |
| 65+ | 65 | 55 | 75 | 50 |

So he did just that. While he could be too come off as quite confident, and somewhat, but not like that, at all, especially when it comes to her. She really had asked him on Facebook in the days after his mother's death to come to the funeral to say a few words, but he couldn't. He wasn't sure she was already in a romantic relationship, so after she finished him on Facebook, he decided to take it there and see how he felt. I will say she was completely, and I think that he is there every day, but terrible and apologetic.

That would have been the end of it. But then everything else in his life Tolson wasn't going to give up that easily. He was desperate just to be as free person, and so he started going to his own court to do what that would bring a newspaper or some work, and he would just spend time on the radio as the weekend unfortunately became the winter. He had no interest of trying to discuss him at his university ever here.

[illegible]

Journal of Democracy (ed.) and David D. Halberstam (ed.), Is Egypt at the Tipping Point? in Clinton and Pals. 1.1. 2005. Clinton receives calls at the White House on June 18, 2005.

He did that three to four times a month for your last year.

Blatter said she never knew in his time and with any one else that it would be pretty unswerving and might be closer to stalking. But she said that knowing his personality at one time plus network and power, he was dangerous.

7. measured at an age relatively independent of the age at onset.

Essentially, the actresses gathered and pay off the tabbies. He participated in a charity fashion show event last year and one of the photos was posted to Facebook by a photographer who had covered the event. There were a lot of people who commented on it. He said the one that stood out was Katrina. She wrote "Love this!" He said for her to do something like that is completely out of character for her and it's not him wonder if she was trying to return the favor once he had the two.

“I was not the average, I was different. I needed to be the best.”

11. Personal
 Please explain how and when your business has been successful.

He was born in Istanbul, Turkey in 1937. He immigrated to Canada from Turkey through Polakovic as a young man in 1989. He actually earned two degrees in Turkey: one in political science and the other in hotel management. However, those school credits weren't accepted in Canada. So he started off working at Two Horizons during the night shift. After just a couple of weeks on the job, he developed enough of a rapport with his "customers" that new and strong religious affiliation from a more stable social base. Some have been converted by missionaries.

But despite all his advances and the many places he visited, Yotsumi was still pessimistic about becoming a master. He is a talented but nervous painter and never has lost real quiet from his earlier days as Yotsumi.

© 2004 Blackwell Publishing Ltd Journal of Internal Medicine 255: 111–118

Sunshine festival embodies African culture

BY GABRIELE BERCHETTI

Shades of brown and reds to the sun. It is a full grown tree, an emblem by Nelson Mandela. It means "I am because we are." A person is a person because of people. It means that we cannot exist in our own tiny alone. We need each other in the fully human. The message of inclusion and understanding are embodied in the name of the thing on the Sunshine Festival: a celebration of African cultural heritage in Waterloo Region.

The festival took place in the Waterloo City Hall Marketplace on Family Day, Feb. 18. As a part of Black History Month, this festival which launched in 2011, featured a full day of music and dance, vendor workshops on African drumming and dancing, delicious African cuisine and an exhibit that showcased African talent from Africa.

"When you think of Africa you think of one culture and one land, one continent, one computer for doing on the Internet. That really is a combination of many cultures and it's about celebrating all of it."

This cultural African experience was a way for people to appreciate the enormous positive values and beauty of Africa and its various cultures. But more than that, it was a way to embrace people from cultural heritages to break down and challenge stereotypes, second African identity and build bridges between communities through the sharing of both cultural traditions and art forms.

Organizers try to bring more and more to the event each and every year. The emphasis this year was on including more activities for kids, which they did in the form of a drum line, face painting, a magic show and public viewing at City Hall.

"This has just exploded from what it was six years ago and less."

The event provided a fantastic opportunity to positively impact children and youth of Africa, decent by providing a space for them to create and explore their heritage and identity through the arts of their culture.

In the year of Black History Month it was also held to create a positive community space to celebrate African culture and identity while creating positive change in addressing the negative impacts of discrimination.

"It is a chance for all Canadians to explore the richness of African culture and the beauty of it and how it fits."

"Being on the Sunshine highlights the best and brightest of who we are as a community and invites everyone of all cultures to come and celebrate our presence in the Waterloo Region website.

The event, which is host of an partnership with the African Canadian Association of Waterloo Region, the Waterloo Waterloo Cultural Center and the City of Waterloo, also includes on grounds, a food truck and community support. Any surplus is given to other African organizations to strengthen the African community in Waterloo Region.

You can connect with you from the event, plus keep up to date on other similar events in the region, so were africanwaterloo.ca, or at the thing on the Sunshine Facebook page.

EAT WELL, LIVE LONGER
Learn more at eatwelllivebetter.ca

DOON IS HERE for YOU!

Welcome You!
Sunday, February 21st
12-4pm
Waterloo
Carnegie Community Centre
200 Edward Street
Waterloo, ON N2Y 5G9
519-745-1234

- Student/Parent Support
- Career Coaching
- Employment
- Teaching Our Story at the Table
- Networking for Students/Parents
- Kitchen for Students/Parents
- Music Practice Space
- On a Quiet Space to Reflect

STUDENTS' PLANS FOR READING WEEK NUMEROUS AND VARIED

PHOTO BY JESSIE BIRCHARD

Second-year students at the school, student Dave Reynolds tells Spoke Online about his plans for Reading Week. Every day, they will have opportunities to read.

BUSINESSES CONVERGE AT RIM PARK TO SEEK OUT GRADUATES

PHOTO BY LARA KALIA

The job fair at Rim Park in Waterloo had thousands of students from Cambridge College, the University of Waterloo and Wilfrid Laurier University attending in hopes of finding a job. The rooms were filled with different businesses and employers of new who were looking for students.

Punk's not dead, it never dies

RESEARCH DESIGN

A guy walks up to me and asks 'What's purple?' So I kick over a purple can and say 'That's purple.' So he kicks over a purple can and asks 'What's purple?' and I say 'No, that's friendly.' and then I say 'You're friendly.' Billie Joe Armstrong

Armstrong was once quoted as saying that the concept of punk has always been about doing your own thing, a sense of urban anarchy and individuality. He said punk is a lifestyle, not a pop culture movement.

To prevent false security, keep your files backed up, and remove old credit-card receipts every four weeks. For the rest, remember this: To break up a budget, you have people there are a hard lot. It's thousands of farmers who have no sense of individuality and yet not even know who the Star Route is."

The last Matchless Remond in London, England in 1975 though their time together was short – just two and a half years – and they only released four singles, and one studio album (Never Mind the Bollocks, Here's the Sex Pistols). However, in that short time they created a movement, in the United Kingdom, bringing punk rock to the forefront of the music world.

These Proteids should be secure thereby. They require not repeated condensation with acetic acid. (See also the Quaternary description in the I.C.E.)

Hardware using Intel's Pentium III processor chips should be

"We are not a political band," said Armstrong in a YouTube video. "We do not want to tell people what to do or what to think. We just want to tell them, in music."

Everything out. The rollers around the same I haven't found a single song that has really resonated with me or made me think

Hands like Hickley who when they first released their self-titled album in 2004 had a very original sound, now seems to have sold out with the latest release of their album, 2009.

There is nothing place within boards with, never change.

most potential play-impairing up-coming genres. I turned, before the house music or techno turned perhaps. All I want is to listen to a band with members who play their own instruments and sound as great live as they do on their album. From where I stand, that is becoming a rarity.

I never quite understood this to be a love letter to punk music or the punk lifestyle but that's what it is turning into. We need to bring back real bands like the Clash and the Ramones and dress like New Yorkers.

I have a single finger for the 100% and that is that. Every day and I will see a new disease. After a four year run, it would be a lifetime disease. I have no weakness, no

When Atlanta's Warring and Howard got going, we repeated, in my car full of women, most likely gone out of town, they were celebrating a new alliance.

"What always the hell out of us is the monogamy of some people," said Armstrong during an interview. "They don't even listen to our music. They decided in advance that they don't like

It is a society where tourists change in the blink of an eye - it is hard to get people to really stop and listen. I am not trying to say parks are the only means to learn in the real world. I am trying to say as in a world full of instant life there is no time to be a January Student or January Professor.

RACING TO THE FINISH LINE

Americanists left to right: Brandon Fawcett and Jonathan Marks play in boxing gloves during Coronopsis brackets and a Stictia (center) Cladonia (Leptogium) Cladonia.

THE MOTHERS OF CONFEDERATION COLLEGE

Excess sugar affects international students Victoria Kinosh and Michelle Taylor explore how they manage to take care of their children and succeed academically. Read more

LEARNING IN THE DARK

A festival of music and play together at the In The Dark edition of the National PuppetFestivals on Feb. 8. For more story go to www.puppetfestivals.com.

STAYING UP FOR THREE DAYS STRAIGHT

Put It To Rest
Sports reporter Brian Koppell died of a brain tumor Feb. 14. He diagnosed the physical and psychological tolls of such work as a writer, briankoppell.com, for the end of his career, and he wrote

